

By Lynn University on Aug. 10, 2021

Updated health and safety protocols

The diligence and hard work of faculty, staff and employees kept Lynn University operating safely during the pandemic and since we reopened in August 2020. Over the last year, COVID-19 cases remained manageable on campus, and we did not see any significant transmission inside the classroom as students and faculty followed facial covering and healthy hygiene protocols.

Therefore, as we plan for the fall semester, we have updated our health and safety protocols.

Regardless of vaccination status, facial coverings are required in classrooms, the Health Center and the COVID-19 testing center. Masks are strongly encouraged in all other indoor spaces. All other health and safety precautions remain the same at this time, and we will make additional modifications as conditions change.

Remember, your friends and colleagues may continue to wear masks for many reasons, and we ask everyone to respect individual choices.

You can continue to find important information and updates regarding campus operations at lynn.edu/roadmap. We also encourage students and employees to stay informed of the latest health recommendations.